Moralities of Odienné by Night: an anthropology of light and darkness

André Chappatte,
Leibniz-Zentrum Moderner Orient

'I arrived in the provincial town of Odienné (Ivory Coast) by truck after a three-hour journey on unlit sandy roads across the bush. We first saw a few dots of light from afar; after a curve, we then saw a unique street lighting revealing silhouettes of men carrying assault rifles.'

Based on a socio-sensory approach to Odienné by night, this presentation explores the interplay between the darkness of the night and the dim light of electricity in terms of sensual ambiances and their moralities.
